TIMELY TOPICS

THE GENERAL IS DEAD

LONG LIVE THE GENERAL

There was one man who lived with the title of general well deserved. He did not lead an army of blood and destruction. He led an army of redeemed ones who went forth to save others. General William Booth's name is a household word the world over. He was noted as the poor man's friend. He lived, labored, sacrificed for others. With talents enough to make him many times a millionaire, he scorned riches, and with money which he earned with his pen he helped on the work of saving others. He was a born orator and an enthusiastic evangelist. Away back in the years when as Rev. Wm. Booth he preached in old country pulpits crowds would throng to hear him, and hundreds influenced by his preaching would turn from their sins to live a better life. When again as general of a large evangelistic, missionary and philanthropic agency or army he travelled the world over and over again, crowds would still flock to hear him. India, Australia, Africa, America or Canada, he always gained the ear of the working man, and fearlessly he would warn rich and poor alike to flee from the wrath to come, and live to love their fellows.

He is now gone to his reward. His eldest son, Bramwell Booth, is now the leader of that mighty host of sanctified men and women which the world over are seeking the lost of mankind.

It is said that the ecclesiastics of Westminster Abbey cannot see their way clear to give his body a place there for the general was so unorthodox, so unconventional in his methods. Yet did not his methods succeed? Wonderfully they did. General Booth needs no tomb in Westminster Abbey. He needs no cold stone monument either. His memory will remain ever fresh. Hundreds have gone on to their reward who were brought into a better life through him. Hundreds of others are on their way. The Salvation Army will continue as long as it, through God, meets the needs of men.

No more enduring monument could anyone have than this. No better shrine than to be enshrined in the hearts of generations of men. This the grand old warrior of the cross has, and will have as long as the memory of man lasts.

THE EVIL OF GAMBLING

The case of two bank clerks who used money belonging to the bank at which they were working for gambling purposes, is indeed another sad evidence of the evils attending gambling. A young clerk engaged in the Bank of Toronto, at Toronto, lost $25,000 as a result of playing the races with money belonging to the bank. Later he went to Woodbine and then at Dufferin Park, where he lost $4,000 of his own money and $10,000 belonging to the bank. He later went to Hamilton with $12,000 of the company's money and lost that. In despair he turned on the gas in his room at the hotel, after having swallowed a couple of bichloride of mercury tablets, and is now in a critical condition.

Another young man engaged in the Standard Bank used funds of the bank while playing the races, and is out $5,000. He cleverly tried to get clear, but failed, and is now in prison awaiting trial. This evil is very attractive to young men, and - sometimes to older ones, too.

We only wonder why gambling is allowed in connection with races at all. The question arises: who has these great amounts of money which were lost by these lads? There are a number of men everywhere who go by the name of "crooks," but that is too good a name. Ghouls they should be called. Daylight robbers, too, they are. Young men are easy victims to these. They are heartless, conscienceless scoundrels, and should be hounded out of every community where they practise their diabolical works. These young fellows' lives are ruined for life, yet those scoundrels are permitted to go on with their robberies.

CHINA AGAIN

Yuan Shi Kai, the president of the latest republic, is now in hot water, for he has caused two generals of the southern army to be slain, apparently because they were friends of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the most enlightened man in all China. The latter, too, is on his way to Peking, and it is rumored that he is slain. Yuan will need to give some good reasons for these treacherous acts. It is hard to see however he can do this. One need be no prophet to see that if he has caused the death of Dr. Sen that he will forfeit his own life, for Dr. Sen is greatly beloved of the Chinese.

Poor China will see many more troubles ere she emerges into the sunlight of liberty. We wish her well, however.

No Car Shortage, Says Bury

The C.P.R. and the G.T.R. are already arranging for the sending west of all available empty cars in readiness for the moving of the immense crop which is expected this year. In fact the movement of cars west has already begun, and by far the biggest collection of railway stock the west has ever known will be in readiness as soon as threshing starts.

Officials of both roads express the opinion that the problem of shifting the crop would this year be handled with the minimum of inconvenience, while the Canadian Northern announces that it is in a position to handle the same proportion of the crop which it handled last year, namely one-third.

Vice-President Bury of the C.P.R., whose headquarters are in Winnipeg, declares his belief that there will be no car shortage this year.

We all know that the Bar U ranch is famous for its Percheron horses. To provide grain for the horses oats have been grown successfully for many years. Lately fall wheat has been extensively grown, until this year the area devoted to fall wheat is 1500 acres. It is expected the whole crop at the ranch this year will grade No. 1.

Farmers and others will please govern themselves accordingly, to get in their supplies in good time.

Two of our sports were out duck shooting the other day. They had along with them a bunda that didn't know nothing, and in order to give one of the sports a show, the other took the animal off in another direction. Sport No. 2 returning to the slough, presently a flock of big fat duck rose up a few yards in front. At the crucial moment, snap went the trigger, but no report. A second time up went the trigger and a second snap, but still no report. By this time the ducks and ducklings were sailing away out of sight. The astonished sport sat down to make an examination of the cause when he discovered that—he had omitted to put any cartridges in the gun. It isn't safe now to say "ducks" to him now.

One of our popular young bachelors took his best girl to church at Cayley Sunday night, visiting the horse and buggy to a nearby post. After the service the gallant young bach. went for his horse and buggy to take "her" home, but, lo and behold, the whole thing had skiddooed, yambooed out of sight. A search party was hastily formed, armed with pea shooters, and headed by p.c. Chumbley, carrying a dark lantern, one of Scragg's pet calves bringing up the rear. Every nook and corner—even Eaton's store—was thoroughly searched, but without avail. An extra squad was added to the searching gang, armed with new pea shooters and some of Kwong Lung's home-made dough-nuts, and reinforced by three more of Scragg's pet calves. The search was then renewed with greater vigor. In the meantime, by the thoughtfulness of our town p.c. the town refrigerator had been prepared to give the burglar a fitting reception—that is, if he were caught. At last the perseverance of the searchers was rewarded by seeing some dark object in the distance which proved to be the missing outfit. The whole procession then wended their way back to town, the four pet calves bringing up the rear, the crowd rejoicing that the lost had been found, the calves joining in the jubilant song, by singing a quartette in their well known style. It was learned later that a practical joke had been played upon by the gallant young bach. Moral: Leave your horse and rig in safe hands or in the lively barn.

Juvenile Delinquents Act

Alberta, the youngest province in Canada, is the first to comply with the conditions of the Dominion act respecting juvenile delinquents, which will come into operation as soon as possible after the order-in-council and the certificate of the provincial attorney-general are entered at Ottawa. Authorities on the subject of child-training, including Judge Lindsay of Denver, Judge Mack of Chicago, and Judge Adams of Cleveland, declare this will complete the best series of acts for the rescue and protection of children in force anywhere on the American continent.

The act which was introduced into the Dominion parliament through the efforts of W. L. Scott, a barrister at Ottawa, and assented to in July 1908, extends the principles that have been applied to the delinquent and neglected child in Alberta since the adoption of the Children's Protection act, passed by the provincial legislature.

The preamble of the Dominion act fully sets forth the spirit of remedial legislation in the interest of children as follows:

"It is inexpedient that youthful offenders should be classed or dealt with as ordinary criminals, the welfare of the community demanding that they should, on the contrary, be guarded against association with crime and criminals, and should be subjected to such care, treatment and control as will tend to check their evil tendencies and to strengthen their better instincts."

Disassociating the child offender from all criminal taint is the primary idea throughout the act. The term "child" applies to a boy or girl apparently or actually under the age of 16 years. This designation permits those who have authority to enforce the act to use their own discretion in regard to a child which the parents might maintain has reached its sixteenth year, but which may obviously be in need of such protection as the law gives, though it applies chiefly to children whose exact age cannot be determined.

The act provides for dealing with offending children summarily in courts where the proceedings are private. It is unlawful for any newspaper to publish the name of the child or parent or guardian without special leave. Courts shall not be held where adult offenders are being tried and the child awaiting trial must not be placed in a jail or other place where adults are or may be imprisoned.

The children's court may be divested of the customary majesty and rigid formality which usually attend the administration of justice in the tribunals of record. A provision of the act dealing with this point says: "The proceedings may, in the discretion of the judge, be as informal as the circumstances will permit." The testimony of a child may be received, though not given on oath, but such evidence, uncorroborated, is not sufficient to convict a person.

Several means are provided under the act for the child proved to be a juvenile delinquent, but the action taken must in every case be that which the court believes is for the child's own good and the best interests of the community. The offender may be fined, or placed under probation either in its own home or with a suitable family, or committed to the charge of any duly organized children's aid society or the superintendent of neglected and dependent children. It is also provided that a child over the age of 12 years may be committed to an industrial school, but it shall not be lawful to commit a child under 12 years,

"unless and until," to quote from the act, "an attempt has been made to reform such child in its own home," or in the ways named in the foregoing paragraph.

Another section provides that the expense of maintaining a child in the industrial training school may be collected from the parent or guardian, in the event they are able to pay. The idea is to prevent any one from swearing his charge is intractable, in the hope that the child will be sent to an institution to be fed, clothed and educated at the expense of the province. The penalty for an adult who, either wilfully or through neglect, contributes to a child's delinquency, is as high as $500 and a year in prison.

The judge of a juvenile court is given the powers of two justices of the peace or of a stipendiary magistrate. The position is an honorary one and the selection will take into consideration the special qualifications of the person to be appointed for dealing with children. Probation officers have the same power as constables. The present system will be enlarged and improved, volunteer and paid probation officers being used more extensively than previously.

Arrangements are being made with two Protestant and Catholic institutions to care for girl delinquents, while as heretofore boy offenders will be sent to the industrial training school at Fortage La Prairie, Man., with which the province has an agreement to handle its juvenile charges requiring reformation.

R. B. Chadwick, superintendent of neglected and dependent children in Alberta, is deeply impressed with the state of child legislation in this province, saying the problem is near a solution, with the additional power granted by the Dominion act.

Quite a number of harvest hands are finding ready employment here. Farmers are offering $2.50 per day, while some of the laborers are holding out for $3. It is needless to say that very few farmers can afford or will give the $3, and men will be wise to accept the $2.50 rather than be idle for days and perhaps weeks.
